

Winter housing for Ukrainian refugees in a Ukrainian ecovillage

In the ecovillage Busha Toloka in Vinnytsia region in the Ukraine at the moment more than 250 people from all over the Ukraine are finding accommodation because of the loss of their houses or they cannot go back home because of military actions in their regions.

At the moment, they live in the ecovillage in summer houses and in the homes of the members of the community. These people have to stay somewhere in winter as well and therefore the community has to build a common house in which they will be able to spend the winter with heating and water facilitation inside.

After the war, this building will be used by the community for GEN Ukraine gathering, for festivals and as some common space for the community. It will always be an open space where people can come and are welcomed.

For the construction of this building around 250 000 Euro are required and some expertise and voluntary work. It will be a straw-ball-house construction of 345 m² basis and two floors for about 100 people to stay during winter.

The work will start in the middle of August and the construction has to be done until the middle of November. Therefore, donations and funding are required.
